Chan Ngan, an inquest held at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon, to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of her 8-year-old daughter, Lam Yin-ying, who died at the Kowloon Hospital while under an anaesthetic during an operation for acute appendicitis, stated that she did not sign the statement of consent for the operation to be performed on her daughter but was compelled to do so by the nurse who insisted on her signing it and led her hand to make the mark of a cross.

"I asked the nurse what sickness my daughter had," she wouldn't tell me except that an operation was necessary," remarked the mother.

Mr. E. Himsforth, who sat as Coroner asked, "Did you understand that by making that cross you had given the consent for the doctor to perform the operation?"

"I did not know,"
Replying to Inspector Rogers, who appeared for the police, as to why she did not mention to the police that the nurse, as she alleged, had compelled her to sign the document, she said that the police did not ask her at the time.

THE NORTH CHINA PROBLEM

CAUSE AND EFFECT ANALYSED

Stimulating Book

Reviewed By The Editor

All who are interested in the Sino-Japanese crisis should read Dr. Shu-hai Hsu's excellent little book entitled "The North China Problem," which has just been published by Messrs. Kelly and Walsh, Limited.

Prepared under the auspices of the Council of International Affairs, Nanking, the author, who is Professor of Political Science at the Yenching University, has, by the writing of this book, made a valuable and stimulating contribution to the already considerable number of volumes on the Sino-Japanese situation in particular and the problems of the Pacific in general.

Based on carefully documented evidence and written with a clarity of phraseology and impartiality of sentiment most praiseworthy in view of the theme, "The North China Problem" comes very appropriately in view of the present crisis. It dispels the mists of misunderstanding which have shrouded the actual facts concerning the numerous "incidents" which, over a period of years, have contributed to the tension in Asia and retarded the peaceful development of China. Having surveyed the Sino-Japanese position in detail, the gifted author devotes his concluding chapter to "The Outlook, and he asks, "What will come next?" "This, of course," he comments, "only the Japanese can answer." The Chinese position is a clear one. Manchuria and Jehol are integral parts of China. They are integral parts not in the sense that they are mere Chinese possessions. Most of this territory is inhabited by the Chinese race in the same way as the region within the Great Wall; and it is western fringe is inhabited by a race which for centuries has had happy relations with the Chinese. It is inconceivable that China should ever be disposed under any circumstances to part with Manchuria and Jehol.

Tell me, doctor...

You know what children are—always falling and cutting their knees and grazing their hands. I don't regard such things as trifles: I had a young brother who died of blood-poisoning. Tell me, is there no efficient antiseptic I can apply at once with perfect confidence?

'Dettol' is such an antiseptic—dangerous only to germs. It is a clean, pleasant fluid—non-poisonous and non-staining—highly efficient as a germ-killer. You can apply it freely (there are directions on every bottle). Remember, the smallest break in the skin is a wide-open gateway for the germs of septic infection. Disinfect cuts and scratches at once with 'Dettol'. The way to prevent blood-poisoning is to kill the germs that cause it.

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

(BY SCRUTATOR)

"Many tend to think of Christianity far too narrowly. They think of it as a specific Revelation, or as a system of metaphysics, or as a philosophy of history, or as a scheme of redemption, or as a way of life, or as an actual historical movement. But while it contains all these, it is not anyone of them separately; and its strength in any one of these aspects partly depends on its strength in the others also. So that the student of only one never knows fully even what that one really is."

William Temple.

The real work of Christianity is not the creation and maintaining of the Churches alone; it is the permeation of all life and civilization with the Christian spirit. It includes the whole field of mankind's experience in desire, in thought and in action.

THE METHOD OF CHRISTIANITY

Christianity does not merely take all the themes of human interest, and proceed to lay down absolute precepts in regard to each one; it sets each one in relation to its doctrine of God in Christ, which is its own essential central self. Christianity proceeds by proclamation; it proclaims who God is and what He has done. It presupposes some belief in some conception of God, and broadly speaking, in its beginning it presupposes the conception of God which evolved throughout the Old Testament.

This conception of God was not only an intellectual abstraction—it was a living conception, a living thought which had grown not only by intellectual processes of reflection but out of the living experiences of individuals and of the Hebrew nation. So when we say that Christianity presupposes the Old Testament, we do not mean that it is dependent upon a conception of God which has been derived by the study of the Old Testament.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE OLD TESTAMENT

Christianity then presupposes not a doctrine but an experience, that whole long living experience of individuals and nations which is recorded in the Old Testament. That is primary, but there is also its intellectual presupposition as well, which is derived from the Old Testament, and that presupposition includes the following conceptions:

- God is the Creator of the Universe. He is in the world not because the world is necessary to Him, but because He is necessary to the world. He was before the world and its existence is therefore dependent upon His will.
- God being in the world is a living spirit guiding the destinies and history of the world and taking special action to that end through lives which have given themselves over completely to His direction and will.
- God is one, in the sense that there is only one God but that there might be others, but in the sense that what God is, forever precludes the possibility of there being any other.
- God is righteousness and requires righteousness of those who worship Him.
- But His providence for His people (for those who worship Him in righteousness) is paternal as well as judicial. He loves them, but He also will judge them with inflexible justice.

These elemental beliefs which are contained in the Old Testament idea of God do not exist alone. They are mingled with alien conceptions and ideas. Justice is sometimes tainted with vindictiveness, and the idea of God's providence is in many places definitely limited only to the Jews who worship Him in righteousness, being vitiated by a national exclusiveness.

THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN THE OLD AND THE NEW TESTAMENTS

We must bear in mind also, and this is very important, that the change made by Jesus Christ was not a mere addition to the existing belief in God, it was a profound change in it, in certain respects a modification of it, in others an enlargement of it. The theology of the Old and New Testaments cannot reasonably be combined. The God and Father of Jesus' faith cannot be identified with the Jehovah of Israel. According to Christianity nothing can be true concerning God which contradicts Christ's revelation.

FATHERHOOD

Jesus' revelation of God is revealed partly in his words, and the most characteristic name for God on his lips is Father. The intense significance of his use of this word is emphasised in the retention of the actual Aramaic word, "Abba"—the actual word which he spoke so often—in the middle of the Greek sentences in which the Gospels are written.

Revelation is essentially, not the communication of truths, such as can be expressed in propositions, but the disclosure of personality. The revelation of God in Jesus is eternal in its significance, while those of the prophets were not, because Jesus' revelation is contained not so much in what he said and did, as in what he was and is. Christianity therefore does not ask of the individual that he should accept a theology, but that he should learn to know Jesus. Jesus did not bring the revelation. He was the revelation. In Jesus of Nazareth God is self-disclosed.

REVELATION

Revelation through being, and revelation through words and actions, are different in their nature and in the consequences which they entail upon those who receive them. The fact of the being of Christ determines for us once and for all the nature of the character of God, and it affirms beyond possibility of question, the truth that God is active in the affairs of life. It demonstrates the true relation between material and spiritual, the nature of man's true life, and proclaims God's sovereignty over all things because He suffers in all things. It issues in the creation of eternal life in the individual through the fellowship and the power of God coming to dwell in him—this fellowship when shared, becomes the Church which in turn supplies the means of making God's sovereignty real in the world.

Reverie

By

AXIAN

Have you ever been bewildered, maddened almost, by the multitude of "things" which you are compelled to look at, to think about, and to do?

Often I am tempted to denounce the world, and men and women, yes, even the stars because of their multitude. How perfect it would be to be able to see only one star in all the night sky!

And so I pray—Let me see but one thing only, standing alone in the fullness of its mystery. Let me think but one thought, let me see my thought in the beauty of its silent being. So I pray.

The Mystery

But day succeeds day—I am talking about and kicking about the days of the year like dust before my feet, and every day I see a million things meaningless in the mystery of their nothingness, whilst my ceaselessly seeking mind tires itself with ceaseless aching thought—aches for lost hours and finds nothing whole, nothing singly complete.

Night Scene

I sit on my verandah. The night is still. The aeroplanes are withdrawn from the sky, and the moon sails softly through floating clouds. The stars twinkle at me—almost with mischievous delight. Somehow the moon halts in her voyage through the night and leans at me. A car dashes past, then a multitude of gibbering voices break my silence and the endlessness of everything, the incompleteness of "things" is upon me again.

The Lone Light

I turn to the table beside me and there is a brass candlestick from which a single candle sheds flickering shadows over the page on which I write. Candles at one cent each—tallow and a little flaxen string—but it is beautiful—transcendently lovely. I look at it worshipfully and then I write and look at it again. It is a noble thing this candle, more noble than many human things that live and laugh because of their own stupidity. It burns slowly, steadily because the night is breathless.

It is a communicative thing. It speaks more truly to my spirit than any human being whom I know. Other people are my fellows in the realm of action; they share the before and after of all I do, but that unnamed, that nameless thing within me of which my candle is a part, is constantly being cheated and, disappointed, confused and beaten by the burdens of others' talk and by the weariness of their company.

Demand: Supply

Always men and women want something of me, that I should do something, or become something other than I am, sometimes only that I should give acknowledgment of what they are, but so often that I should take up some cross on their behalf, accept some suffering, or labour to assist them in the soothing processes of their self-deceit.

No! I forego them. I would rather a thousand times have my candle for companion—it gives me light to read by and when I want to write its light is still the same. It stands still beside me. It asks nothing of me. Its beauty is meaningful—incidental but full of symbolic meanings; with it, there is no noise, no insubstantiality of much talking.

The telephone bell rung.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON SERMON

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST. SCIENTIST.

Subject: Truth

The subject of the Lesson Sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, July 25, will be: "Truth."

The Golden Text will be: "The Truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Praise ye the Lord." (Psalms 117:2)

Among others, the following citations from the Bible will be read: "And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True; and in righteousness he doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood; and his name is called The Word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood; and his name is called The Word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. "When's Your Birthday?" showing at the Oriental Theatre on Sunday and Monday starring Joe E. Brown in the leading role.

I MET HIM IN PARIS

Girl meets boys, and so begins one of the year's most uproarious comedy-romances, "I Met Him in Paris"—which stars Claudette Colbert in the type of role which she made famous in her two previous smash comedy hits, "It Happened One Night" and "The Bride Comes Home." "I Met Him in Paris," which also features Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young, opens at the Queen's and Alhambra Theatres to-morrow.

In "I Met Him in Paris," Miss Colbert, a young American girl on a vacation in the French capital, runs into two handsome, romantic fellow-countrymen, Douglas and Young. Both go overboard for the lovely brunette, and each stages his own idea of a whirlwind courtship, which he is certain will sweep her off her feet. Miss Colbert "falls" for both, but can't get around to making up her mind which style of courtship she prefers. Douglas' cool, matter-of-fact, never-speak-of-love technique, or Young's impetuous affection,

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY

There is usually considerable drama and often a touch of tragedy in a prize fight—but not when E. Brown is one of the principals.

The distinctive Brown technique puts a comedy construction on even the most serious of circumstances, and theatre-goers are agreed that he is never more desperately comical than when he is on the receiving end of a flurry of lusty wallop.

The funniest flistic encounter in the history of the screen is included in the action of "When's Your Birthday" which comes to the Oriental Theatre to-morrow and Monday.

GREEN LIGHT

Not so long ago "Green Light" stood at the head of the list of best-selling novels of its season. Now, a Cosmopolitan production "Green Light," which opens to-day at the King's Theatre as a First National release, steps into the front rank of distinctive motion pictures.

Errol Flynn, the handsome Irish romantic who won such a smashing triumph in "Captain Blood," his very first picture, is the star. Instead of a swashbuckling pirate, this time, in "Green Light" he is a heroic young doctor, who sacrifices his promising career in a great city by taking on his own shoulder the blame for an operation bungled by another.

TURN OFF THE MOON

If "Turn Off the Moon" which is showing at the Queen's Theatre to-day, is a sample of what women producers can do, the only thing wrong with the movie is there are not enough women producers. As the first production of Fanchon, known for her presentation-house units, this musical comedy featuring Charles Ruggles, Eleanor Whitney, Johnny Downs, Kenny Baker, Phil Harris and Ben Blue is definite proof that here is a new producer to be reckoned with.

The plot is hilarious. It introduces Ruggles as Dinwiddie, department store magnate and aid to a pair of star-crossed lovers whose affair must be brought to a successful conclusion before he can ask his girl to marry him.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG

And now on the screen you'll hear beautiful Virginia Bruce singing as she's never sung before when this silver-voiced star appears in Universal's gaily romantic picture, "When Love Is Young," which is showing at the Alhambra Theatre to-day.

Miss Bruce sings two hit songs, especially for her individual style of singing. She'll thrill you with such romantic ballads as "Did Anyone Ever Tell You?" and "When Love Is Young."

This picture achieves the perfect blending of music, romance and comedy. It is the story of a country girl who, snubbed by school mates, goes to New York to study singing. She finally gets her big opportunity through a Broadway press agent, played by handsome Kent Taylor.

CAIN AND MABEL

Hollywood's most pressing problem, Clark Gable's moustache, was solved, apparently to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Gable, who is now co-starring with Marion Davies in the Cosmopolitan production, "Cain and Mabel," which comes to the Majestic Theatre to-day, as a Warner Bros. release, was working on the picture when he learned that he was needed at another studio for retakes on his last picture there.

In "Cain and Mabel," a story involving the romance between a prize fighter and an actress, played by Gable and Miss Davies, respectively, Clark is smooth-shaven. In the other picture he wore a moustache. "Make-up men solved the puzzle by shooting a large photograph of the Gable moustache, and, by using it as a model, manufactured an accurate artificial lip adornment."

ROYAL GARDEN PARTY

Foreign Visitors Received

London, July 22.

More than 10,000 guests attended the Royal garden party at Buckingham Palace this afternoon. The absence of Princess Elizabeth from the Royal circle was noted and it became known that the reason was a sprained knee which she had suffered in falling from her bicycle in the Palace grounds on Monday. The injury is not serious.

Mr. Roger Lumley, the new Governor of Bombay and Mrs. Lumley were the guests of the King and Queen at luncheon at Buckingham Palace. Members of the Japanese Commercial Mission at present in England were received by the King during the afternoon, and before the Royal garden party the King also received Senor de Oliveira, the Brazilian Ambassador, and invested him with the insignia of the Knight of the Grand Cross of the Victorian Order.—British Wireless.

GOOD COOKS HEADED FOR BABIES

London, July 22.

Members of the British Medical Association at a meeting to-day discussed infantile mortality, drawing attention to the necessity of a knowledge of cooking with regard to nutrition and hygiene.

This knowledge was important to expectant mothers, who sacrificed their own health through lack of knowledge of how to obtain benefits from food by proper cooking.

A speaker said that no books written by medical authorities on food values and vitamins were useful unless the women of the nation know how to cook in such a way that they will preserve the vitamins.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

COMMONS ADJOURNS

London, July 22.

The House of Commons, which to-day discussed Scottish affairs will adjourn to-morrow week for the summer recess and will reassemble on October 21. The new customary provision will be made for recall of the House at an earlier date if public interest demands it. It is expected that Parliament will be prorogued immediately on the re-assembly and that the King will open the new session on October 28.—British Wireless.

KNIGHTHOOD FOR MR. L. R. LUMLEY

London, July 22.

Their Majesties the King and Queen entertained to luncheon to-day Mr. L. R. Lumley, the newly-appointed Governor of Bombay, after which His Majesty knighted him, bestowing on him the insignia of a knight of the Order of the Indian Empire.

In the afternoon, the King received members of the Japanese Trade Mission at present in England.

Ten thousand people attended a garden party in the grounds of Buckingham Palace to-day, which officially marked the end of the Coronation season.—British Wireless Service.

UNDER COVER OF NIGHT

Mystery and romance placed in the peaceful atmosphere of a great college combine in an excellent new drama from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Under Cover of Night," which opens to-morrow at the Majestic Theatre, with Edmund Lowe featured.

Lowe introduces a new and interesting type of detective; this time a college graduate returned to the scene of his youth to solve a series of mysterious killings in the faculty. Florence Rice, the daughter of Grantland Rice, famous sports commentator, scores in the leading feminine role. This young actress appears to be definitely en route to stardom in the near future.

REFUGEE STEAMER CHALLENGED

London, July 23.

The British steamer McGregor, believed to have been carrying 2,000 Spanish refugees at the time, was challenged by an insurgent cruiser, the Almirante Cervera, as she left Santander yesterday but refused to stop.

The cruiser fired three warning shots across her bows. When the ship was outside the Spanish territorial waters' limits, a British warship was detailed to escort her.—Reuter.

QUESTION IN HOUSE

London, July 23.

The question of protection of Basque refugees from interference by insurgent warships was raised by Capt. W. Wedgwood Benn in the House of Commons late last night on a motion for adjournment.

He said it was shameful that ships engaged in a purely humanitarian work should be captured with British warships looking on and taking no action. Mr. A. Duff Cooper, First Lord of the Admiralty, replied that the Government wished to assist neither side militarily and it was difficult to draw the line between humanitarianism and military assistance.

DELIVERING FOOD

When a town was besieged help given in delivering imports of food and diminishing the demand for food by evacuating women and children was military assistance in a sense. "People who participated in the civil war forfeited the right to expect the influence of Britain in their behalf."

British ships chartered by the Basque Government were as much volunteers as those of Italy, Germany, Britain and France who were fighting in Spain. Speaking with the greatest heat, he added: "So long as I am at the Admiralty I hope not another British sailor will fall in a cause which is not worth fighting for." The House then adjourned.—Reuter.

NEW PROPOSALS

London, July 22. It is understood that the British Government has devised an entirely new plan for procedure in discussing the non-intervention proposals. The new plan will not be communicated to any other Government before the meeting of the chairman's sub-committee, the date of which is not yet definitely set.

As the next meeting of Lord Plymouth's sub-committee will be occupied with discussion of the new British procedure plan, it is expected that examination of the proposals themselves will again be delayed, despite Lord Plymouth's appeal for speed in deciding the issue.

Italian circles in London declare that the Italian Government has no intention of refusing to discuss the withdrawal of volunteers from Spain, and it is understood that Count Dino Grandi, the Italian Ambassador, informed the British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, yesterday that his Government's attitude was not dictated by a desire to shelve the question, Italian circles maintaining that the granting of belligerent rights is a method which will strengthen the control system and should therefore logically precede the withdrawal of volunteers as a subject of discussion. But it is pointed out that the Italian view does not exclude the possibility of a compromise.—Reuter.

ALTERNATIVE PLAN

London, July 22. The British Government is known to have under active consideration an alternative procedure which will meet the situation which arose in the international Non-Intervention Committee on Tuesday when further progress in connection with the British proposals for the full restoration of control on the Non-Intervention Agreement was checked by a disagreement on the order in which separate items in the proposals should be discussed. Officials are still at work on the final form of the new suggestion but it is not impossible it may be submitted to the meeting of the Chairman's sub-committee before the end of the present week.—British Wireless.

ANTI-MUI TSAI SOCIETY

Petition To Secretary Of State

A petition, drawn up by the Anti-Mui Tsai Society of Hong Kong, and addressed to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, asking for legislation to require notification by any person who has, in his house, a young female not his natural born daughter or grand-daughter, is being placed at various centres in the Colony for the signatures of all supporting the suggestion.

Appended to the petition is an outline of a proposed Ordinance for consideration by the Colonial Office, as a basis for a system of general protection for transferred children.

The text of the petition and Ordinance are published in full below.

To The Right Honourable His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The humble petition of the members of the Anti-Mui Tsai Society and those in sympathy with the demand for compulsory notification of transferred children. Sheweth:

1. That your petitioners humbly pray for legislation to require notification to a duly appointed Protector of Young Women and Children, by any person who has, in his house, a young female not his natural born daughter or grand-daughter.

2. That such notification need not be accompanied by a specification of the status of the child in the transferred household, though the Protector may ask the notifier questions regarding the status or condition of such a child.

3. That your petitioners have joined in the humble prayer contained in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof for the following reasons:

(a) By virtue of their close contact with the homes and actual conditions of the inhabitants of Hong Kong and/or their intimate knowledge of the social life of the Colony, your petitioners are strongly of the opinion that the Mui Tsai system is but one of several forms of child exploitation.

(b) Exploitation of transferred children can be of so subtle and (outwardly) innocent a nature that, unless there exists a system of general protection for them, many of the old evils will reappear under different forms and names.

POVERTY-STRICKEN

MOTHERS

(c) For example, a poverty stricken mother may be forced by her poverty to give her child to a stranger or a friend. Such stranger or friend may not wish to adopt the child but may be prepared to give her food and shelter in return for domestic service. Existing legislation prohibits the giving of a monetary consideration to secure such domestic service, so the mother is, to that extent, poorer, while the stranger or friend is to the same extent, better off. Existing legislation, however, does not prevent the stranger or friend from taking the child into the house who, in return, for food and shelter must do menial service, (possibly without payment).

(d) Though the law in Hong Kong effectively prevents flagrant forms of "negative cruelty" which are known to exist e.g. neglect, malnutrition and underfeeding, and though the proposed system of general protection would not and could not rule out such cruelty, still it would give the transferred child some protection since, then, the whole relationship of "notifier" and "transferred child" would come under the official cognizance of the Protector.

(e) Further, girls transferred from parental custody may, under certain conditions, be induced either by threat or persuasion, to be professional beggars or prostitutes, and be brought up with that end in view, without cruelty being proved. Alternatively, these girls may be made to work in factories or as waitresses in restaurants, and surrender their wages to the household in which they are transferred.

(f) For the reasons stated, it is vitally necessary to follow these evils to their ultimate source, that is, to the system of child transference and the accompanying temptation or facility to exploit transferred children.

COMPREHENSIVE REGISTER

4. That your petitioners humbly submit that the benefits to accrue from a system of compulsory notification of transferred children are:

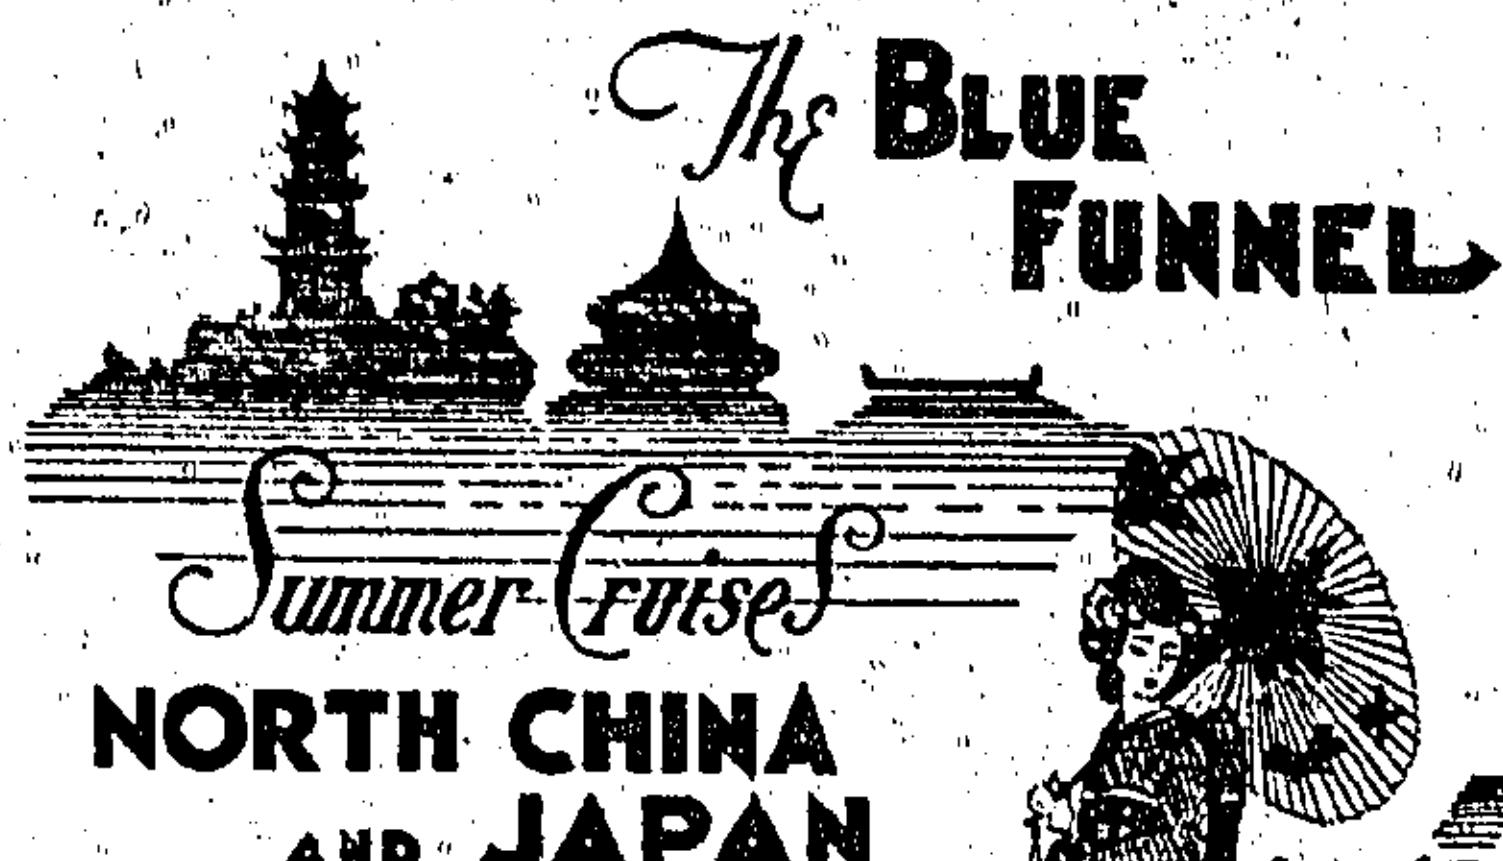

(a) It will furnish the Government with a comprehensive register of transferred children, which otherwise will be wanting. By this means it will be possible to keep track of a large number of children of tender years.

(b) The very existence of such a register will enable the authorities to study the problem of transferred children scientifically and intelligently, and to extend to them effective protection. At present, lack of reliable information greatly hinders legislation and reform.

(c) Such a register will be of incalculable value in contributing to the eventual abolition of the Mui Tsai system.

(d) In a Colony where it is difficult to keep track of an inordinately floating population, the existence of a register, however imperfect, is a paramount necessity for securing contact with, and supervisory control over, transferred children.

"OUT OF THE WINDOW"

Pres. Roosevelt's Reform Bill

Washington, July 22. The last nail was driven to-day in the coffin of President F. D. Roosevelt's Supreme Court Reform Bill when the Senate, by 70 votes to 20, favoured returning the measure to the Judiciary Committee with instructions to prepare a new bill.

The vote in the Senate was preceded by a dramatic meeting of the Judiciary Committee, which Vice-President John Garner conceded that the Supreme Court Bill was "out of the window."

It is stated that the Vice-President pleaded with the Committee with tears in his eyes for a settlement of the differences, whereafter the Committee agreed to ask the Senate for instructions to draft a substitute measure.

It is understood the new measure will deal only with the lower courts and will provide, among other things, for direct appeal to the Supreme Court in constitutional cases and the appointment of lower court judges on the basis of needs, not the age of existing judges. It is generally conceded that this new plan will prevail in the Senate when it is presented by Senator Logan later to-day.

Reuter.

ABANDONMENT SURE

Washington, July 22. Abandonment of the Supreme Court reform plan was virtually assured to-day by the decision of the Senate Judiciary Committee to ask the Senate to return the bill to it, with instructions to draft a substitute within ten days, dealing with lower courts only. The Senate voted as requested.

WITHDRAWAL OF VOLUNTEERS

Paris, July 22.

M. Yvon Delbos, the French Foreign Minister, received in the course of to-day the Italian Ambassador, Signor Cerrutti, The Belgian Ambassador Count Kerchove de Denterghem and the Turkish Ambassador.

It is stated on good authority that the conversation between M. Delbos and the Italian Ambassador was of the same nature as the discussion between Mr. Anthony Eden and Count Grandi on the day before.

The Italian Government is seeking to give a precise formulation to its attitude in the matter of the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain, this being the question that is now completely dominating the deliberations of the Non-Intervention Committee.

Incidentally, it is affirmed here that France will remain adamant in insisting that various points should be considered as set forth in the British plan and that the withdrawal of foreign volunteers, on the largest possible scale, should take place before proceeding with the discussion of the conditions under which belligerent rights are to be granted.

Transocean News Service.

BRITISH PLANS ARE RECOMMENDED

Berlin, July 22.

Germany's desire to see non-intervention in Spain, made effective is shown in the statement issued by the diplomatic news service this evening. The opinion is expressed that the difficulties encountered during the past few weeks are due to the shortcomings of the control machinery which, it is contended, should not be repaired but improved.

It is suggested that the Non-Intervention Committee should make this its prime and urgent task and it is felt that this can be effected on the basis of the British plan.

The 2nd Battalion, The Essex Regiment, forms part of the 14th Brigade at Caterick. The 2nd and 15th Brigades are not yet made up in the new form of three rifle battalions to a brigade. The 2nd K.S.L.I., at Pembroke Dock (Western Command), is posted to the 7th Brigade at Tidworth (Southern Command). The 9th Brigade (Portsmouth) nominally has the 1st Battalion, The Rifle Brigade among its units, but this battalion is earmarked for duty with the 2nd Cavalry Brigade, and its place in the 9th Brigade will be taken by the 1st K.O.S.B. from Caterick.

The 5th Division at Caterick has one more machine-gun battalion allotted to it than have the other Divisions, but this will be adjusted by sending the 2nd Battalion, The Manchester Regiment from Streatham to Aldershot. When this is done the 1st Battalion, The Royal Scots Fusiliers, a machine-gun unit, will leave Aldershot to take a normal tour of duty in Scotland in turn with the other Scottish.

TO GET RID OF STOMACH TROUBLES

An English Doctor writes:—

"I And then 'Bisurated' Magnesia taken after most of my meals is the only thing that keeps me free from pain and discomfort, and I take it regularly. I often prescribe it for my patients, and have had very good results."
(Signed) Dr. H. G. M.A., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P.

THE English doctor is the most conservative medical man in the world, and when he not only recommends but personally uses a remedy there can be no more convincing proof of its efficacy. This doctor is but one of many who constantly advise the use of "Bisurated" Magnesia in all cases of indigestion. Most stomach trouble is caused by acidity, and the reason why "Bisurated" Magnesia gives quick relief is that it instantly neutralises excess acid and soothes, heals and strengthens the inflamed stomach lining. Nothing could be simpler, safer or surer. If you suffer with indigestion or stomach disorder of any kind put your faith in European science and make an end of your troubles by taking "Bisurated" Magnesia after eating or whenever pain is felt.

PRESENTATION TO RETIRING DOCTOR

A large number of guests were present, including Mrs. Soares, the Consul-General for Portugal, Mr. A. B. Laborinho, Dr. G. De Brito Chaves, Director of Medical Services, Macao, members and committee of Club Lusitano, and many others.

Addressing the gathering the President said, in Portuguese:—

We meet in this hall to-day to tender our just and well-deserved homage to our distinguished friend, Dr. Soares, who in company with his family is leaving to-morrow for the homeland after 25 years of arduous medical work in the neighbourhood of the Colony of Macao.

As President of this Club, I beseech you to tender sincere manifestation of our deep respect and gratitude to our friend, Dr. Soares.

Dr. Soares does not need any formal introduction on my part; he is so well-known and respected by compatriots both here and in Macao, so in brief words I can express the true and sincere feelings of our community, when I extend to him our deep gratitude for the many favours and kindnesses he has shown to the many whom he has helped in medical aid.

I can well recollect what Dr. Soares has done for us when he sacrificed some of his previous time by coming once a week to Hong Kong to attend to some of the needy cases in spite of his many occupations in Macao.

Dr. Soares suitably replied, and in his advice to the young Portuguese doctors, he said, in Portuguese:—

You must go through a life of sacrifice where very seldom your work is understood or compensated.

It is only with the true sentiment of duty and good understanding of doctors' work that you should attend people.

It is only with the inside feeling and self-consciousness before you should attend a patient who is at a critical moment, and above all you should try your best to attain the high level of the profession before trying to deal with critical cases.

truth, might lend colour to the belief that the Japanese influence was being exerted to shape Chinese internal political development. Anything to create this belief, he continued, could only harm Japanese interests and hamper all desires for the friendliest mutual relations between Japan and China and their neighbours and friends.

To the same purpose was the statement at that time by the American Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, whose statement included this significant paragraph: "Unusual developments in any part of China are rightfully and necessarily the concern not only of the Government and people of China, but of all or many Powers having interests in China. For in the relations with China and in China, the treaty-rights and treaty obligations of the treaty Powers are, in general, identical. The United States is one of those Powers. . . . Political disturbances and pressure give rise to uncertainty and misgivings and tend to produce economic and social dislocation. They make difficult the enjoyment of treaty rights and fulfilment of treaty obligations. . . . This Government adheres to the provisions of treaties to which it is a party and continues to bespeak respect, by all nations, for the provisions of treaties solemnly entered into for the purpose of facilitating and regulating the contacts between and among the countries signatory."

There is no reason to believe that either Britain or the United States of America have altered their policies since then. If anything, they have strengthened those almost identical policies.

Thus has the precedent been established, and as in Law so in War, cases are influenced by pertinent precedent.

Japan might well consider this aspect before trying to force her case.

AN EMPRESS BOWS

To prepare for the arrival of the Emperor and Empress Mother in Peking a new station had been set up near the old terminal of Ma-chia-pu, to the south of the city.

A gorgeous pavilion was constructed and furnished with thrones of gold lacquer, jars of cloisonné and vases of fine porcelain. The road from the station to the Imperial palace was lined with troops, who knelt reverently as the cortege swept by. Most of the foreigners who were then in Peking went up onto the wall, above the Ch'ien Men gate in order to watch the procession from the curved lunette that protected the gateway.

Among them was a young Italian midshipman, Don Rodolpho Borghese, who described the scene as follows: "There was a strong wind and much dust. But all Peking had collected on the top of the wall, to enjoy the spectacle, which was really very fine, and imposing. First to arrive were the Manchu Bannermen on their fiery little horses. Next came a group of Chinese officials in gala robes, and finally, the Imperial palanquins which advanced at an almost incredible speed between the two lines of kneeling soldiers. The higher the rank of the person carried in a palanquin, the faster he should go. The court chairs, in that memorable occasion, seemed to move as fast as the Tartar cavalry.

"When they reached the enclosure between the wall and the outer lunette, the chairs halted and the Emperor and Empress stepped down to carry out the ceremony prescribed by the Rites for a homecoming; that is to say, to burn incense and recite some prayers in the tiny temple built up against the side of the wall. In that temple was a shrine to the tutelary gods of the Manchus. As she got out of her chair the Empress glanced up at the smoke-blackened walls and saw us; a row of foreigners, watching her arrival from the ramparts. The eunuchs seemed to be trying to get her to move on, as it was not seemly that she should remain there in full view of everybody. But the Empress was not to be hurried, and continued to stand between two of her ladies who held her up under the arms on either side, not because she needed any support, but because such is the custom in China when a great personage appears in public on a ceremonial occasion. The Emperor stood and waited a little distance off.

"At last she condescended to move, but before entering the temple where the 'bonzes' were ready to begin the ceremony, she stopped once more and looking up at us, lifted her closed hands under her chin, and made a series of little bows.

"The effect of this gesture was astonishing. We had all gone up onto the wall in the hope of catching a glimpse, as she passed, of the terrible Empress, whom the West considered almost an enemy of the human race. But we had been impressed by the magnificence of the swiftly moving pageant and by the beauty of the picturesque group, in palanquins of yellow satin flashing with gold. Something told us that the return of the Court to Peking marked a turning-point in history, and in our breathless interest we forgot our resentment against the woman who was responsible for so much evil.

"That little bow made to us who were watching her, and the graceful gesture of the closed hands took us by surprise. From all along the wall came an answering, spontaneous burst of applause. The Empress appeared pleased. She remained there for a few moments longer, looking up and smiling, then she disappeared within the temple."

Don Rodolpho Borghese was right. The return of the court to Peking after the Boxer troubles was indeed a turning-point in history, and Tzu-hsi's little bow and smile marked the beginning of a new policy. From "The Last Empress" by Daniele Vare. (Copyright 1936. Doubleday, Doran).

THE COCKNEYS ARE STILL WITH US

You meet people at Bloomsbury parties who say that Londoners are losing their character. In a machine-made age, they say, the Cockney is being worn down to a dead level. His wit is being crushed out of him, they lament; the mechanism of a great city is smoothing all his bright and individual edges and moulding him to one universal pattern, slick, efficient, and dull. Don't believe it. While London has her cockney mongers, her traders in the street and in the market-place, she will have the blood of the Cockneys in her veins. She will still be defiantly impudent, quick of mind, impulsively generous, a little sentimental. She will still be the city which the machines couldn't conquer.

The Cockneys are still here. Standing beside their stalls in the street markets, pushing their barrows beside the kerb, presiding over mountains of junk along the Caledonian Road, roaring invitingly down Petticoat Lane on a Sunday morning, holding you with plausible eloquence in the narrow stretch of Leather Lane, offering you dogs of high degree in Club Row—they are the immortal Londoners, uncrushed and uncrushable.

Things are very different in Farringdon Street. There, by the pavement, you will find salesmen who have subdued their methods to suit the more polished world of the City. They are the aristocrats of London's 8,000 stalls. Their friendliness is less boisterous, less hearty, than the friendliness of other street markets. It is more reserved.

The men at the flower stalls are the unofficial gardening advisers to the suburbs. City men consult them before carrying away plants for their gardens.

"You wouldn't recommend those, then?" says the City man.

"Not for 'your' garden, sir," says the man at the stall. "I would advise these. They're harder, sir."

"Very well," says the City man obediently.

At lunch-time, in Leather Lane, the clothesman stood behind his stall and let himself go. Leather Lane is a long, undistinguished street which links Holborn and Clerkenwell, and in the morning the market is a quiet place, doing business in a placid way; but it bursts into sudden life when the offices around disgorge their workers at the lunch hour.

The clothesman, brown-faced and leather-lunged, slipped a new jacket on, and drew uproarious attention to its manifold merits. He pleaded with the ring of people in front of him, striving to guide them along the path towards the True, the Perfect Suit. He exhorted them. He commanded them. He despaired of them. "You won't listen," he mourned. "You won't be told. You think you know everything. You think everybody's a rogue. There 'are' some rogues, but 'everybody' isn't a rogue."

He surveyed the crowd pityingly. Then, with electrical loudness, he spoke once more of the jacket. "HAVE YOU EVER SEEN ANYTHING AS GOOD?" he demanded. "ARE YOU GOING TO MISS THE CHANCE?"

Just along the road a man at a fruit stall was chanting lugubriously, in a monotonous and absent-minded sing-song: "Luvverly pears—melt in yer mouth—try 'em, they're luvverly—they're luvverly, try 'em—melt in your mouth—luvverly pears."

"Penny a glass!" shouted a lemonade man.

The streets will never be dull while the markets last. They are the strongholds of the Cockneys. In them you will always find the bubbling humour and the cynical wisdom which are the undying London—James A. Jones, in "London's Eight Millions" (London: John Long).

MALAYAN REVIEW

New Society

"It seems to me that all of us who live here have a duty to our city as well as to ourselves. I hope and believe that this meeting to-day will prove to be the opening of a new chapter in the history of Singapore. I can see nothing in the printed aims of the society that is not good and as such, I heartily commend it to the support of the public."

This was the comment of H.E. the Governor, Sir Shenton Thomas, introducing The Friends of Singapore at the inaugural meeting of the Society last week at the Singapore Exchange Room.

"I feel that a society of this sort cannot but appeal to those of us who are here only for a time." "We regard Singapore as our home away from home. It is a place in which we have made many good friends whom we shall remember with pleasure and affection when, in the end, we leave it."

Sir Shenton presided at the meeting and with him at the head table were Sir Ong Siang Song and Dato Roland Braddell.

"It is proposed to form a society which shall be known as The Friends of Singapore," said His Excellency, introducing the society. "That name means exactly what it says, nothing less and nothing more."

"It means that there will be from to-day, as we hope, an association of persons united together by the common interest of trying to make Singapore more and more attractive more and more worthy of her reputation as one of the great cities of the East."

"The society will be non-governmental, non-municipal, non-racial and non-local. Indeed it connotes Malayisation in its purest form (Laughter)."

"Its activities will not be restricted by too narrow definitions and in its work it will have regard to the interests of the many and not just those of the few."

"And so I feel that a society of this sort cannot but appeal to those of us who are here only for a time. We regard Singapore as our home away from home. It is a place in which we have made many good friends whom we shall remember with pleasure and affection when in the end we leave it."

Amoy University

Malayan Chinese must have read with gratification the news that the Amoy University is being nationalised. The institution was established with the aid of funds collected largely in Malaya.

It was reported that Dr. Lim Boon Kong, who will be remembered for his yeoman service as a Legislative Councillor of the Straits Settlements, would sit on the Permanent Advisory Council of the university as a life member. In that capacity, he would have the right to nominate a successor to his present office as principal of the university.

This seat of learning owes its present form, in a large measure, to the unrelenting efforts of Dr. Lim, who has been the principal for many years.

The university was founded by Mr. Tan Kah Kee, the former Chinese planting pioneer in Malaya, in remembrance of whom a number of scholarships will be provided.

The nationalisation of the Amoy University marks another milestone in the cultural advancement of China. There can be no doubt that out of the gates of that institution will come forth young men and women, who, under the tutelage of Dr. Lim, himself a scholar of outstanding merit, will serve their country to the degree expected of them.

Show Industry Saved

The Commissioner of Customs, F. M. S., anticipates that this year more Lancashire goods will be purchased by the Chinese community in the F. M. S. The statistics for last year showed that the Chinese community was buying more high-class cottons than in previous years.

The main reason is that foreign foreign piece-goods have increased in price as much as 25 per cent. The foreign quota allotted to these States is four per cent, and when these became exhausted the Straits Settlements became the chief source of supply, which is the reason for the higher price for foreign goods.

Another factor that has helped British trade is the exemption from payment of duty on British cloth imported by canvas shoe manufacturers. This action on the part of the Government has saved the Malayan shoe industry.

Many importers of British piece-goods are confident that this year Lancashire will derive real benefit from the quota policy if made-up textiles are included and the quota put on a square yard basis to prevent the increase in importation of wider cloths which are now coming from foreign sources.

Malayan Tin And Rubber Exports

Malaya made good her deficiency in the export of tin ore at May 31 with an increase of 1,298 tons in her June exports.

Statistics issued give the domestic production as represented by exports from the F. M. S. of tin and tin ore during June which totalled 7,899 tons compared with a monthly quota of 6,595 tons—21 tons in excess of the quota exported.

Colony stocks of rubber at June 30 were 49,319 tons, an increase of 11,925 tons on stocks at May 31.

Malaya failed to export her rubber quota for the first half of this year by 8,468 tons.

The quota for the period, after deducting the carry-over from 1936, is 225,540 tons and Colony exports for the period totalled 217,072 tons, a deficiency of 8,468 tons.

met with a remarkable response, and have now been published in book form.

In a series of fourteen chapters, Mr. Mais deals with nearly every type of writing from diaries and letters to novels and school magazines, films and animal cartoons.

Each chapter is full of sound practical advice written in a light easy style with plenty of humour. This book will make an admirable present to the editor of the Troop magazine, the log keeper or to the would-be holders of the Journalist Badge.

King And Coronation

In these days book-shop windows are filled with an extraordinary number of books about His Majesty King George VI and the ceremony of the Coronation.

Quite one of the best books written about His Majesty is entitled "King George VI," by Dorothy Margaret Stuart, published by Harrap, 2s. 6d. net.

The story is admirably told in a simple, easy style, without that overflow of sentiment which is so frequently found in books of this nature.

North China Situation

JAPAN'S ATTITUDE

Shanghai, July 23.—According to reliable information from Tokyo, it is said that ever since Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Loo Shan address, and the decision of the Nanking Central Government to stoutly resist aggression and all attempts at violating China's sovereign rights in North China, there have been frequent meetings of the Japanese Cabinet to consider the situation and decide upon the proper policy to adopt to counter China's present attitude.

Realising that China means business, and in view of her firm and determined attitude, it is said that the Japanese Government, although not wishing to expose its anxiety, does really feel greatly perplexed.

Though hostilities in North China have not completely ceased, it is believed that the danger of outbreak of war between China and Japan is now over.

But in view of the determined and relentless attitude of the Japanese militarists, the future is difficult to read.

It is also reported that many business houses in Tokyo have closed their doors as a protest against war with China, that the civilian population is against war, and that many Japanese women may be observed crying in the streets, owing to their husbands having been called up for active service.

JAPANESE PAPER NOTES

Shanghai, July 22.—It is stated that the Japanese Government has decided to circulate $30,000,000 paper notes in North China with the express object of upsetting the currency of North China.

TROOPS, WAR PLANES ON MOVE

Tientsin, July 22.—A train-load of Japanese troops arrived here from Shanhaikwan at noon to-day.

This morning 200 Japanese troops left for Peiping by train, and ten Japanese war planes reconnoitered the railway in advance.

AIMS TO RESTORE THE MANCHUS

Shanghai, July 23.—It is said that although a patched-up peace between Japan and China may be arranged, it cannot last for long, since it is the policy of Japan to create a special administrative region in North China.

Japan has been scheming to dominate and obtain control over certain Chinese military units in North China for the purpose of seizing Peiping and replacing the Manchukuo "puppet" Emperor Pu Yi on the Throne of China, under the new title of Emperor of the Great Ching (Manchu) Empire.

AT TONGKU

Chinwangtao, July 23.—At noon yesterday, a Japanese submarine and a torpedo boat arrived at Tongku. At five o'clock in the afternoon, eight Japanese officers arrived to give orders.

A big quantity of helmets, uniforms and swords, etc. were landed, besides eight anti-aircraft guns.

It is reported that these things will be despatched to Tientsin for the use of the Japanese troops there.

JAPANESE AT TAKU

Tientsin, July 23.—Latest reports from Taku are to the effect that things are getting serious. A company of Japanese are constructing a temporary pier on the southern bank of the Hai Ho.

Last night it was pronounced that Chinese and Japanese troops clashed at Taku, but this has not been officially confirmed.

It is reported that the Japanese plan is to capture Lukouchiao and Peiping, and retain Tientsin as base of operations.

Two nights ago the Tientsin-Pukow Railway Authorities removed all important books and documents to the Foreign Settlement for safety.

SINGAPORE INCIDENTS

Singapore: Two incidents between Japanese and Chinese in Singapore have been reported. Firstly a number of Japanese fishermen are alleged to have been assaulted by the Chinese and secondly some Japanese school girls were molested by Chinese youths.

HOSTILITIES TO BE RESUMED

Peiping, July 23.—It is reported that the Japanese hostilities are increasing in their plans to seize and occupy North China. The present peace is only temporary, and cannot last for long, as the Japanese troops in Peiping and Tientsin are ready and prepared to resume hostilities. Japanese war planes are continually reconnoitering the Chinese positions, and they have been ordered to be in readiness to support the troops and artillery in the coming advance against Peiping.

Since the repeated flights of Japanese war planes over Peiping, all Foreign Legations and Foreign residents have started to fly their national flags over their buildings.

It is reported that big bodies of Japanese troops are continuing to enter Shanhaikwan, and special military precautions are being adopted at Yukwan.

GENERAL CHEN CHI TANG OFFERS SERVICES

Nanking, July 23.—It is reported that General Chen Chi-tang, former war-lord of Kwangtung Province, has telegraphed to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, President of the Nanking Executive Yuan and Chairman of the Military Affairs Commission, offering his services to the Government and expressing his determination to join the Central Government's armies for repelling the Japanese invaders.

WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS
DOUBTFUL

Peiping, July 23.—Up to yesterday afternoon, according to European observers, there is no reliable evidence of Japanese and Chinese troops as mutually agreed.

The troops of the 37th Army, which is stationed in Peiping are being withdrawn in accordance with the terms of the truce. Although both sides are withdrawing some of their troops, big bodies still remain, and are watching each other's movements.

JAPANESE WITHDRAWALS

Tientsin: Reports reaching here, and published in the newspaper, "Takung Pao," state that Japanese troops continue to withdraw towards Fengtai from positions around Peiping. Artillery is falling back with the infantry.

The withdrawal of General Feng Chi-an's troops from Peiping to Lukouchiao is now confirmed.

Japanese transports, with the first section of reinforcements, reported to belong to the 10th Division, have not yet arrived, though they were expected at Taku Bay yesterday morning. It is understood the transports actually sailed from Japan, but it is possible they put in at Dairen to await developments at Peiping.

Meanwhile seven field guns, drawn by horse artillery teams, and an escort of 100 men, left for Peiping yesterday morning. Japanese military supplies are being unloaded on the north bank of the Haiho River and Chinese troops are in bivouac on the south bank.

NEW AGREEMENT

Shanghai: An announcement that details of the new Sino-Japanese agreement in North China, concluded on July 19, will not be made public, in order not to aggravate the situation, has aroused uneasiness in Chinese circles, where it is feared that the terms may be of a most unpalatable nature.

A Japanese report that the Nanking Government has approved the terms is discredited. It is even doubted whether the terms have been communicated to the capital.

Meanwhile, reports state that Shih Yu-san may be appointed Mayor of Tientsin in succession to Chang Tse-chung, who is in disfavour with the Japanese.

CHINESE REINFORCEMENTS

Tokyo: Chinese Central Government troops continue to advance northwards, and are concentrating large quantities of munitions and provisions in the south-west of Hopei, according to information reaching the authorities.

APPEAL TO BRITAIN

London, July 22: An appeal to Great Britain to save North China from being turned into a second Manchuria was made by the Russian newspaper "Izvestia" to-day.

The journal asserts that Japan is adopting the same tactics now

WORLD CONFERENCE OF PROTESTANT CHURCHESState Recognised As Highest Secular Authority

London, July 23.—The World Conference of Protestant Churches held at Oxford approved a memorandum defining the position of the Conference in the question of relations between the Church and State at the present day. The memorandum recognises the State as the highest secular authority in its own sphere but subordinated therein to God. The State has the duty of maintaining law and order. It is not the ultimate source of law but is only a guarantor of the latter and the Church is consequently justified in assuming a critical or even oppositional attitude towards the State under certain circumstances.

The Church urges and calls attention to the growing de-Christianisation of States as well as their tendency to embrace within their sphere the entire activity of the individual and to attribute to themselves the absolute value. In view of such a tendency it is the duty of the Church to recall to mind her own mission which is to preach the word of God. It is incumbent on the Church to co-operate with and obey the State but it is also her duty to criticise the State when it breaks the Divine law. On the other hand the Church has the right to demand of the State freedom of belief, teaching and preaching, of public worship and missionary activity, liberty for her ministers and the impart of religious instruction to youths.

JEWISH STATE
IN PALESTINEMohammedans Resent
Formation

Cairo, July 23.—Great demonstrations against the formation of a Jewish state in Palestine have been held at Mecca, Medina and Riad and other towns of Arabia. It is believed that the action had been approved by Ibn Saud.

In Medina, in the mosque containing the tomb of the Prophet, speakers recalled the promise of Caliph Omar, Manomet's war leader. Taking over the protection of holy places in Palestine, Omar had promised never to permit Jewish settlements. The speakers pointed out that this promise was still valid.

PLANS FRUSTRATED

Jerusalem: Strikes broke out expectedly in various Transjordan states yesterday. The police arrested several persons at Amman who have been exiled but who secretly returned.

The arrested men are found to be in possession of bombs and ammunition and are suspected to have planned bombing attempts on the lives of prominent Transjordan politicians.

In North China as she did in 1931 when she carried out her plans for the conquest and literal annexation of Manchuria, as a result of a passivity of the western powers.

The fact that Great Britain in the present conflict is again adopting the position she took up in 1931 seems especially lamentable and alarming. Japan will give up her plans in China only the event of certain trustworthy Governments ceasing to tolerate them, "Izvestia" maintains.

DIET THANKS GARRISON

Tokyo: There is every indication that the Government will have smooth sailing during the fortnight's Session in the Diet which is likely to seize the first opportunity of adopting the resolution upholding the Government's policy in North China and passing a vote of thanks to the Japanese garrison in North China.

General Sugiyama reported to the Cabinet that the withdrawal of the 29th Army is being peacefully carried out in accordance with the local agreements.

A message from Peiping states that Japanese military authorities in North China declare they will follow a policy seeking a thoroughgoing solution of the problem until the situation becomes satisfactory to Japan, irrespective of Nanking's recognition of local agreements.

The spokesman of the Foreign Office said that if the full terms of the local agreement of July 19 and July 19 were nullified a local settlement cannot be effected. If the Chinese Government changed its policy towards Japan, the Japanese Government would respond.

WALKED FOUR YEARS

Bus Driver's Experience

After spending nearly four years walking from London to Capetown, Jock Scott, a 49-year-old bus driver, of Woking, returned to Southampton recently in the Union-Castle liner Balmoral Castle.

He set out from London on October 1, 1933, and was seen off by the then Lord Mayor. He walked to Dover, crossed to Calais by boat, and from there went through France, Italy, Sicily, Malta, the Libyan Desert, Egypt, the Sudan, and so down to Capetown, which he reached on June 7 of this year.

Pipers of the South African Scottish, with which he served during the war, welcomed him at Capetown and piped him into the town upon his arrival. He delivered a letter from Sir Ian Hamilton to the colonel of the Capetown Highlanders, and has brought back a reply.

ORDEAL IN DESERT

Recalling his experiences Scott said: "The toughest stretch of my journey was the 200 miles across the Libyan Desert, where I subsisted on two pints of water in five days. It was tough and go whether I should get through. Twice I had to seek refuge in trees from lions, and once I was bitten by a scorpion."

Scott set out on his adventure because he was unemployed. He is an old hand at long-distance walking, and in 1910 spent two years in walking round Africa, a distance of 10,300 miles.

BARONET WHO SOLD TEAS TO SAVE ESTATE

Sir Philip Grey Egerton, Bart., died in London recently at the age of 73.

Owner of nearly 9000 acres of land in Cheshire, he ran a tea hall with the aid of his wife in the beautiful grounds of their home at Oulton Park, Tarporley, to help to keep the estate together.

When their home was destroyed by fire, they lived in a tiny cottage, using a tent in the garden as a bathroom, until some of the out-buildings which remained intact could be converted into a house.

The heir to the baronetcy is the Rev. Brooke de Malpas Egerton, who is in his 92nd year. He is the son of late Rev. William Henry Egerton, the fourth son of the ninth baronet, and was born on August 19, 1845.

Sir Herbert Dowling: "He has earned the reputation of being the best policeman in the Empire."

Mr. G. C. S. Corea: "A young Minister of outstanding capacity and charm of manner."

The Ceylon Planter: "No planter in the world have a better record of treatment of their labour."

Mr. Clifford Figg presided at the dinner and over 250 sat. The dinner was followed by a dance and cabaret.

In the course of his speech Mr. Figg said that Mr. Ormsby-Gore was unique amongst Secretaries of State for the Colonies in his knowledge of the Colonial Empire acquired at first hand.

As Under-Secretary of State he visited the West Indies, East, West and Central Africa, Ceylon, Malaya, and while in the Middle-East found time to visit the Netherlands East Indies.

He added: "We have vivid and happy recollections of his visit to Ceylon in 1928, and all of us who were there at that time were deeply impressed with his energy, and his desire to study our problems, agricultural and political, at first hand." (Hear, hear.)

UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY

Welcoming Sir Andrew and Lady Caldecott, Mr. Figg said: "When Sir Andrew lands in Ceylon he will find awaiting him and his family a warm welcome. Sir Andrew, if I may say so, is also unique, as no other Governor has had the opportunity, as he has had to-night, of meeting at the same table the Financial Secretary, the Minister for Labour, Industry and Commerce, and the Bishop of Colombo, before ever setting foot in the Island. (Laughter). "We are delighted to welcome all of them, and I hope Mr. Corea particularly is enjoying his visit to this country—at any rate that portion of it which is not occupied with business."

CEYLON'S RIGHT

Mr. Ormsby-Gore, in the course of his reply, said:

"Wild horses would not drag from me my opinion of the Ceylon Constitution. (Laughter). All I know is that it is essential that all should realise that the people of Ceylon, by education, by more than a hundred years' association with Britain, British ideals and British practice have won for themselves the right to have a voice, and not merely a voice but a responsible voice, in the Government of the Island."

SIR ANDREW'S JEST

Sir Andrew Caldecott made a witty reply and in the course of his remarks said:—

"I have listened to the kind remarks of the Right Honourable Se-

ANTI-MUTSAI SOCIETY

(e) The mere requirement of notification will have a disciplinary effect on the notifier such as is likely to deter him or her from exploiting a transferred girl or bringing her up for unworthy or undesirable objects.

SOCIAL LEGISLATION

(f) The extension of the present social legislation in Hong Kong to all transferred children who are not natural-born daughters or grand-daughters, will greatly stimulate the social conscience of the Colony and pave the way for a series of much needed social reforms in this city of nearly a million souls.

6. That your petitioners humbly submit that the various objections to compulsory notification though real, are by no means insuperable, nor are they so formidable when compared with the need to protect transferred children:

(a) For instance, it was objected that the proposed measure violates Chinese customs and is subversive of liberty. Moreover, it may be feared that corruption would increase. These objections can be met by administrative safeguards, such as limiting the right of inspection to the Protector and her assistant Protectors (women of university standing). Further, exemption from inspection may be granted in approved cases by the Protector with the right of appeal to the Governor-in-Council if the Protector declines to grant exemption.

TACTFUL PROTECTION

(b) Again, it may be argued that if hindrances are placed in the way of free transfer of children, then more unwanted children will be found in the streets of Hong Kong. The answer lies in the knowledge that compulsory notification (even with inspection) will in no way deter the genuinely charitable from taking children into their homes. It is the evils connected with child transfer which legislation endeavours to remove.

(c) Further, it would be possible, with a tactful Protection, to interfere as little as possible with the privacy of homes.

6. That your petitioners verily believe compulsory notification to be practicable and in order to ensure its efficient working, humbly suggest that there should be appointed one or more European women Protectors of university standing, to assist the Secretary of Chinese Affairs to carry out such a system of notification. These Protectors should be, as far as possible, of the same quality in educational standing as Colonial Civil Servants in the Colony.

7. That your petitioners verily believe that women with the necessary educational qualifications, ability and knowledge of Chinese life and customs are available.

8. That in order to crystallize the nature of the legislation prayed for in this petition, your petitioners respectfully append herewith an outline of an Ordinance for sympathetic consideration. This outline is not put forward as a properly drafted legal document, nor are its provisions unalterable. The outline is humbly submitted as a possible basis for a system of general protection for transferred children and as showing the kind of system envisaged by your petitioners.

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that the Right Honourable, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State may be graciously pleased to direct that early steps may be taken to protect transferred children as prayed for above and your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray etc., etc.

ORDINANCE PROVISIONS

An outline of an Ordinance with suggested provisions accompanying the petition follows:

1. This Ordinance with suggested provisions accompanying the petition follows:

1. This Ordinance may be cited as The Transferred Children Protection Ordinance, 1937.

2. In this Ordinance, unless the context shows a contrary meaning: "Protector" means a lady officer appointed by the Governor to be Protector for the purposes of this Ordinance, and includes an Assistant Protector or Assistant Protectors so appointed.

"Protected person" means a female notified or liable to be notified to the Protector in accordance with the provisions of the Ordinance. "Register" means the Register of Notifications prescribed under the provisions of this Ordinance.

3. Every person, who shall hereafter have as a resident in his household or dwelling place for any period longer than three months, any female, not being a natural born daughter, or grand-daughter, who is under the age of 12 years, or who, having left the custody of her natural parents before she attained the age of 12 years, is under the age of 18 years, shall notify such female to the Protector in the prescribed manner, within 13 weeks from the date of such female entering his household or dwelling place.

4. (1) No one shall overwork or ill-treat a protected person or subject her to any punishment to which such person might not reasonably subject his own daughter.

(2) Every person in whose house or dwelling place a protected person resides shall provide such protected person with sufficient food and clothing of a reasonable kind, and, in case of illness, with such medical attendance as such person might reasonably have been expected to provide for his own daughter.

5. The Protector may apply in a summary way to the Supreme Court for such an order as the Supreme Court may make for and in the interests of the protected person, after such notice, if any, to such person as the Court may direct.

6. It shall be lawful for the Protector at her discretion to grant exemption from inspection under this Ordinance, and to revoke such exemption. Any person aggrieved by the refusal of the Protector to grant exemption or by the Protector revoking such exemption shall have the right to appeal to the Governor-in-Council whose decision shall be final.

REASONABLE WAGES

7. In any case in which the Protector shall be satisfied that the status of a protected person is substantially that of a domestic servant, it shall be lawful for the Protector to order the person in whose household or dwelling place such protected person resides, to pay reasonable wages for the services of such protected person, and to order that the whole or any part of such wages be paid to the Protector on behalf of such protected person. Any person aggrieved by any order of the Protector under this section shall have the right to appeal to the Governor-in-Council whose decision shall be final.

8. The Protector shall be the official guardian of all protected persons.

9. In every prosecution under this Ordinance it shall, until the contrary is proved, be presumed that the girl in question was a protected person under the provisions of this Ordinance at the time of the alleged offence and was not the natural daughter or grand-daughter of the person in whose household or dwelling place she resided.

10. Every person who contravenes any of the provisions of this Ordinance or any regulation made under the Ordinance, shall upon summary conviction be liable to a fine not exceeding $250 and to imprisonment for any term not exceeding six months.

11. In every prosecution under this Ordinance, whether evidence be called on the question of age or not, and girl who appears to the magistrate to be or under or over any particular age shall, unless the contrary is proved, be deemed for the purposes of such prosecution to be of or under or over such age as the case may be.

12. Nothing in this Ordinance shall affect any right of guardianship already vested in the Secretary for Chinese Affairs.

13. Notification may be effected at the office of the Protector or at the office of the District Officer at Tai Po or at any Police Station. The register shall be kept by the Protector.

14. The particulars required on notification shall be specified in Appendix A so far as they can be reasonably ascertained.

15. The notification form, when filled up, shall be read out to the person effecting the same, or shall be interpreted to him if he is unable to read or understand English sufficiently well, and shall be signed by him.

REPORT NECESSARY

16. (1) The person effecting notification shall make and sign a report upon:

(a) The death of the protected person.

(b) Disappearance of the protected person.

(c) Any intended removal of the protected person from the Colony whether temporarily or permanently.

ECONOMIC ACTIVITY

London, July 22.

The measures to be taken to provide against the danger of recession in economic activity whenever the stimulus of the rearmament programme ceased was the subject of a Commons question answered by the Prime Minister, who made reference to the matter in a recent speech at Albert Hall.
Mr. Neville Chamberlain said measures of this kind were not such as to fall within the purview of a single department of the State. The whole matter was being studied by the Departments most concerned and the government would afterwards consider it in the light of these studies and would then have to decide on its policy.

THIS MONEY CHANGER WAS DARING!

ARMED ROBBER CAUGHT IN WANCHAI

Despite persistent efforts on the part of the police to suppress armed robberies yet another crime was attempted with characteristic audacity in broad daylight about 4.30 p.m. in Wanchai yesterday.

Cheung Yim Ming, aged 28, managing partner of the Shing Lee Money Changer, of No. 170 Johnston Road, ground floor, reported to the police that at about 4.30 p.m. yesterday he was in the front part of his shop when a Chinese male entered and at once drew a revolver from his jacket and pointed it at him saying "don't move."

Defying the robber and running out of the shop Cheung Yim Ming heard the revolver in the robber's hand click and saw another man standing outside the shop.

When Cheung reached his friend's tailor shop next door, he blew the police whistle.

Accompanied by his friend Cheung returned to his own shop and on their arrival he saw the robber running away in an easterly direction for a short distance before turning west along Johnston Road to Tai Wo Street.

Following the thief, Cheung and his friend shouted to the effect that the man was armed and a Chinese constable drew his revolver and fired at the robber when the latter pointed his weapon at the constable.

At that moment an Indian constable seized the robber who was taken to No. 2 (Wanchai) Police Station.

HOSPITAL AUTHORITIES EXONERATED

The child was brought to the Kowloon Hospital on July 3 suffering from a pain in her stomach, and it was revealed after medical examination that she had acute appendicitis and an immediate operation was necessary.

NURSE'S STORY

Miss M. Soon, nurse at the Kowloon Hospital was then instructed to obtain consent from the parents or relatives for the operation to be performed.

Miss Soon, in evidence, stated that she saw the mother of the child and had explained the necessity for an operation. She said that she was satisfied that the mother had fully understood her explanation and being unable to write, the mother made a cross on the statement. She further stated that the mother realised that making the cross indicated her consent for the performance of the operation.

DOCTOR'S EVIDENCE

Dr. K. H. Uttley, medical officer of the Kowloon Hospital, in his report stated that the child died from lymphatism during surgical anaesthesia while undergoing an operation for acute appendicitis.

It was discovered after the post mortem examination that the gland behind the neck had become larger than the normal size, and such condition of the gland could not be easily detected without an operation.

OPERATION JUSTIFIED

The jury, comprising Messrs. Fred Cullen (foreman), L. dos R. Campos, Fung Man-sul, after hearing the evidence, returned a verdict of death by lymphatism and added that they were perfectly satisfied that the action of the Hospital authorities in operating in this case, was in accordance with established practice.

CAN JAPAN SURVIVE?

The concluding paragraph of this vital volume of 107 pages is particularly pertinent. It reads: "Japan's fortunes appear to have started on the downward grade. The unrestrained military adventures which she has undertaken on the continent during the last few years seem to have proved too much for the strength of her economic and constitutional structure. Already we can hear the latter creaking under the pressure of popular unrest and military insubordination bred by those adventures. How long it will continue to stand the strain is truly a question to which time may soon furnish the answer."

AFTER 20 YEARS

Two men who had not seen one another since 1917, when one was a prisoner of war in a German camp at Frankfurt met in Great Burstead Churchyard, Essex, at the graveside of the crew of the Zeppelin L32.

They were Mr. W. E. C. McKenzie, of Gardiners-lane, Wickford, and Herr Karl Schafer, of Frankfurt, one of a party of German ex-Servicemen who had come to lay a wreath on the grave. "Schafer and I instantly recognise each other," said Mr. McKenzie, who was one of a British Legion party to welcome them. "It was a wonderful moment for both of us."

WEATHER REPORT

DETROIT manufacturer, says British United Press.
Miss Bessie Wallis Warfield, as the Duchess of Windsor then was, married Lieutenant Winfield Spencer in 1918. Eleven years later she filed a bill of complaint to show that he had deserted her and an uncontested divorce was granted on these grounds.
